

I REMEMBER WHEN:

"I started at LTC, before it was a state college, in 1992. It was the first year for the Design Drafting classes to be held on the new campus. At that point, every parking lot and drive was gravel. The main road going to the Nilges Technology Center was in between the Nilges and the automotive building. Being a Design Drafting major, I remember watching the Osage County Community Center being built and was intrigued by watching the steel structure being built and seeing each beam, column and girt going into place. Every time I make it back through Linn, I'm constantly amazed by how much the campus has grown since my graduation in 1994."

- Sean Major, '94 Design Drafting